Tulsa Town Club

The Tulsa Town Club met Monday at the Tea Cup Inn for its regular dinner and at the same time held its monthly business meeting. Three new members were introduced and cordially welcomed into their ranks. They are Misses Mary Whittaker of a publishing house, Miss Agnes Peason, under casualty insurance classification; and Miss Edna Howard under fire insurance.

In anticipation of the report from the Women's National Association of Commerce held in St. Louis last 14 and 15, there was a full attendance. Miss Caroline Baker, the club's secretary, gave a very full interesting report of the activities of the meeting there and it was decided exclusively. She told first of the personnel of the convention the business done, the social side of the meeting, and then gave outline of the work before the club in carrying out the purposes of the Women's Association of Commerce.

That the women of the convention are strong, brilliant, personable goes without saying. It was shown that the meeting held in the vacation was an attempt amalgamation of the National Woman's Association of Commerce and the body gathered there, brought together by the War Work Council of the Y. W. C. A. Miss Baker was a member of the joint committee which underwrote this work and when after three days effort finally reported a tentative plan, which was accepted by the National Association of Commerce for among other reasons that the convention body of the W. A. C. was not convinced that the business and professional Women's Association of Commerce was not willing since it was an established organization to lose its identity in an association which had not been tried out.

The belief was expressed that the two organizations would continue to meet annually together in one powerful body. Mrs. Ora Lightner Frost, a member of the Town club, who made community singing one of the enjoyable features of the two conventions, was made second vice-president of the National Association. Miss Agnes McDowell was made treasurer of the extension committee which expects to do much work during the coming year. Miss Baker was elected a member of the national board of governors. Other interesting reports were made by Miss McDowell, Miss Anna Heard and Miss Zula Poole, who also attended the convention as delegates from the local club.

In addition to the business transacted the delegates reported a most delightful program arranged by the St. Louis Town club who were the official hostesses of the convention.

Local advertising matter was distributed. "The Tulsa Spirit" created much interest and samples of Hohens with labels bearing the inscription "No Flies on Tulsa" were a source of much amusement not only among the convention delegates, but qualified one delegate for admission to a luncheon given by the St. Louis Ad club.

The officials asked the essentials saying Tulsa delegates believed in advertising it practiced it.

Before adjourning plans were made for a picnic supper at Sand Springs park next Monday evening. Miss Florence Howe, Mrs. Wm. G. Bottom, and Miss Ella Reed were named as a committee to perfect the picnic plans.

NEXT PRESIDENT TO BE ELECTED BY WOMEN

Mrs. Bass of Democratic National Committee Gives President Timely Warning.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The women of the country will elect the next president, President Wilson was told yesterday by Mrs. George Bass, chairman of the women's committee of the democratic national committee at a conference at the White House. Mrs. Bass told the president that no man who opposes the league of nations could expect to receive the presidential vote of the women.

The women are for peace, as they were the greatest sufferers of the war, and they cannot support any man who opposes a movement to that end," she declared.

Mrs. Bass has just returned from an extended western trip with Hermon S. Cummings, chairman of the democratic national committee, during which she made 67 speeches.

Mrs. Bass told the president she found the sentiment overwhelming in favor of prompt ratification by the senate of the treaty of peace and the accompanying league of nations covenant, and that the impression of the women of the west is that prompt ratification will mark a return of normal conditions and a substantial reduction in the costs of living.

PARADE ESCORTS MEMPHIS EDITOR TO COUNTY JAIL

MEMPHIS, Aug. 5.—Prepared by a band and accompanied by scores of prominent citizens, who paraded the principal streets of the city, Edward T. Leech, editor of the Memphis Press, an afternoon newspaper, entered the Shelby county jail yesterday to begin serving a sentence of 10 days imposed for alleged contempt of Chancellor Israel Price court.

The contempt charge grew out of an editorial written by Leech during the municipal campaign last year. The editorial, it is claimed, referred directly to no individual nor group of individuals, but Leech was tried for contempt of Chancellor Price court and sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and serve 10 days in jail. An appeal to the state supreme court was taken but the verdict of the lower court was sustained.

Friends of Leech, who organized the parade today and accompanied him to jail are planning a rally meeting next week when the editor is released, it was said. Former Mayor Little, who was a leading figure in the parade, addressed a gathering of several hundred persons at the jail just before Leech was locked up.

Mr. Jesse Terry left Monday for Englewood, N. J., where he went to join Mrs. Terry and boy. They expect to return to Tulsa about the first of October.

OLDEST PAPER IN THE STATE.

Edmond Sun Claims Distinction as It Is Over 30 Years Old.

Special to The World.

EDMOND, Aug. 5.—The Edmond Sun is celebrating its 30th birthday with this week's issue. Said to be the oldest weekly paper in the state, the publication was established in 1889, less than three months after the opening of Oklahoma territory.

W. M. Reynolds founded the paper and A. D. Daily has been in charge since 1905. Congressman E. B. Howard set the first stick of type in the first issue of the Sun.

bind the door with the three gilt balls, strange refuge and breeding place of the poor, and enough realized to pay the butcher and the rent man?

They were starting fresh and without debt, thought Annie. Her native optimism caused her to smile. But there was one thing that saddened her. Bertie would have to quit the senior class. Not only were the yearly dues impossible to manage, but there would be no time to go, no appropriate clothes, no opportunity to return even in the modest way the friends — friends of the young people who were its members. That was hard. For herself Annie didn't mind. She had the baby, but Bertie had the baby, too.

When she thought of the boat club she felt vaguely troubled and a little bitter. Bertie so loved the taste of oysters he got up there, the gay atmosphere, the decent fellows and girls who made up the parties. If he worked all day at his unloved job, was it fair that he should have no pleasant diversion on the long evenings? She knew he had been more than a man since Hobbes' coming simply a man and woman joined in a sort of mortal spirit. They were now a family and of inexcusable importance to the state and to the future. What could tell how important? How absurdingly so!

Ties had been speaking of the rounds in the basement. They're nice rooms, the pantries had assured her. They look right out onto the street. I notice ties in rooms that look onto the street on account of my husband. A woman, it's mind so much. She's got her housework and the children, but you know how it is with a man. A man's gutter see-saw, but he can't get out, he'd go out if the truth?

Annie smiled at the recollection of the remark. Yes, it was true, she guessed. If there was only some way Bertie could keep on with the club.

I think of all the great, unquainted noises of the rich along the Hudson and on Riverside drive. They had noted them as they cantered by. Millions of dollars worth of luxury that nobody used except for a few years at a time. Health and joy for the poor that the poor had no possible access to?
